

In the face of the extremely sensitive and worrying situation in which our planet and our societies are, I am deeply convinced that one of the main challenges for humankind is to find ways of transitioning from consuming to regenerating. That's why we have set ourselves to be a Carbon Net Zero and Nature-Positive company – ambitions that are combined with human development goals, empowering people and promoting equity, diversity and inclusion. Collaboration with suppliers is key to meet our ambition, to scaling up regenerative practices and inventing new business models. I am convinced this is the only path to take and I am very grateful to the committed partners who are leading this change.

Adrien Geiger,

L'OCCITANE Group Chief Sustainability Officer and L'OCCITANE en Provence Director

Dear supplier,

To meet the expectations of our millions of customers around the world, we must manufacture, transport, and sell our products responsibly and sustainably.

The social, environment Procurement al, and ethical impact of our products is closely linked to our suppliers and everything they do. International laws and regulations, especially those related to due diligence, hold us accountable in the case of human rights and environmental violations, as well as ethical breaches, all of which could occur at any stage of our supply chain. Our customers expect us to act responsibly. To do so is our duty to future generations.

As Regional Procurement Director, I must ensure that our commercial partners share our commitments. The first stage of this approach is to establish complete transparency throughout our supply chain. This is the objective of our #NotJustSuppliers program, which aims to direct the social, environmental, and ethical performance of our purchasing at all stages of our business relationships.

In this context, we have invited EcoVadis to evaluate our suppliers' CSR performance in line with international standards. This programme is co-funded by the L'OCCITANE Group and our suppliers (more information is available at www.fees.ecovadis.com). This compulsory evaluation is integrated into our tenders and annual review of our suppliers. It is also part of our B Corp certification process.

Your company has been identified as eligible for a detailed CSR evaluation by EcoVadis. You will receive an email from EcoVadis inviting you to register on the platform, and we encourage you to complete the evaluation process as soon as possible.

Finally, to encourage development in the Beauty sector, we and other multinational companies in the cosmetic industry (L'Oréal, Clarins, Coty, Groupe Rocher, Cosnova, LVMH and Shiseido) are taking part in a consortium called the Responsible Beauty Initiative (RBI). We pool our CSR assessment requests through the EcoVadis platform and share data on a common supplier panel that meet the requirements. To find out more, please visit the RBI's official website: <https://responsiblebeautyinitiative.com/>.

I would like to thank you in advance for your participation in this strategic program and for the precious time your organization allocates to the evaluation process. This will ultimately allow us to contribute to a more sustainable future.

Kind regards,

Acácia Luizella Krigo Galli
